Author Lindsey Pollak has recently released a book, “Getting from College to Career,” containing tips for first-time job-hunters. Those helpful tips are: 1. You should first research on the organization from the website. 2. You should sound like an industry insider and should not express interests in other fields or anything about salary, during an interview. 3. You can ask about the dress code before the interview and show off your knowledge about the company that you acquired from the website, if the interviewer asks anything. And 5. After an interview, the interviewer should be thanked.
